

Severe thrombocytopenia related to long-term trastuzumab exposure

Elena Aguirre<sup>1</sup>, Teresa Taberner<sup>1</sup>, Armando Luaña<sup>2</sup>, Serafin Morales<sup>1</sup>, and Antonio Llombart<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Department of Oncology, and <sup>2</sup>Department of Hematology, Hospital Arnau de Vilanova, Lérida, Spain

---

ABSTRACT

---

Drug-induced immune thrombocytopenia may occur secondary to several chemotherapeutic agents or new targeted monoclonal antibodies, but thrombocytopenia induced by trastuzumab is a very rare occurrence. We report a case of severe thrombocytopenia related to the administration of trastuzumab six months after the first exposure.

---

Key words: thrombocytopenia, trastuzumab, breast cancer.

Conflicts of interest: None declared.

Financial disclosures: None declared.

Correspondence to: Elena Aguirre Ortega, Servicio de Oncología Médica, Hospital Arnau de Vilanova, Avenida Rovira Roure 80, 25001 Lérida, Spain. Tel +34-629-842661; email elenaaguirreortega@yahoo.es

Received September 7, 2011;
accepted October 15, 2012.